Palace to PNP: Get road rage suspect

By Ti Burgeon, John H. Arcilla and Cynthia S. Solano

MALACANANG HAS ORDERED PHILIPPINE NATIONAL POLICE DIRECTOR General Jesus Verano to exhaust all means to resolve Jan Wednesday's fatal, "considerless" shooting of the son of one of its officials.

"We condemn in the strongest possible terms the murder of Mr. Renato 'Rene' R. Verano, Jr., Police Secretary General Verano said over government radio station DZBB. "We have ordered the PNP to take all means necessary to bring the killer to justice."

The PNP has launched a hunt for the assassin Jan Verano, son of the late Police Secretary General Verano, who was shot dead by a police officer in a police station in Manila on Monday.

Verano, 27, was shot dead by a police officer in a police station in Manila on Monday. Verano was the son of the late Police Secretary General Verano, who was shot dead by a police officer in a police station in Manila on Monday.

DR. FE DEL MUNDO'S 98th Birthday and 52nd Anniversary of DR. FE DEL MUNDO MEDICAL CENTER

DOCTOR, MOTHER & CHILD

"I am glad I have been so much involved in the care of children. They are the most rewarding blessing in my life."

NATIONAL SCIENTIST AWARD 1960

"It has been a rewarding and an enriching life in the building of a world of happy and healthy children."

BLESSED MOTHER TERESA OF CALCUTTA, AUGUST 2008

"I am happy that I have helped a few simple expressions of gratitude to the Almighty."

"As mankind owes to children the best it has to give, this Center is a modest legacy to the Children of our Land."

Dr. Fe Del Mundo

"Dr. Fe Del Mundo: A Beautiful Life"

Cathy Tellez Book for Women's Center
Pulitzer Prize for Best Biography

What is the essence of "DR. FE DEL MUNDO'S BEAUTIFUL LIFE"? The answer lies in another question, "Why only love with your heart when you can pour your whole soul into it?"

At 98, Dr. Fe del Mundo has received more than 250 citations and awards as "Grand Dame of Philippine Pediatrics and Medicine, National Scientist, Author, Educator, Public Servant, Humanitarian, & Woman of Many Faces." This monumental of extraordinary achievements were built on a foundation of faith, hope, and love in the care of her being, her soul, the dwelling place of the Divine Healer.

Thus, when the Medical Observer selected her as "Doctor of Distinction," they said:

"It is not for the functions of the mind and the hand that we honor you. We honor you for what it means you that we see in all that you have done... because you firmly believe that more than a keen eye, a sharp mind, and a deft hand, a physician needs a compassionate heart."

C. W. Nields, Fleet Admiral of the U.S. Navy during World War II, wrote about the Children's Memorial Hospital (now the Dr. Fe del Mundo Medical Center):

"Dr. Fe del Mundo has poured her all her great soul into an undertaking to treat with difficulty its emergence from a vision into reality seemed impossible. She has set her faith against hardship after hardship and overcome them all for the sake of her beloved children."

In 2008, Dr. Fe del Mundo received this citation as the Blessed Mother Teresa of Calcutta Award:

"...for her great personal sacrifices to improve the lives of Filipino children and their families... especially the poor and the disadvantaged... we can truly say that she embodies the true spirit and mission of Blessed Teresa of Calcutta."

The Introduction by Florida Caltella to Marsha Ledesma's book "Living from the Heart" is an endearing tribute of a mother to Doctors Fe:

"Dr. Fe del Mundo stood next to God in my mind whenever she touched my little one in the awesome silence of her mothering. She touched my little one in the awesome silence of her mothering. Your article brought back memories of long ago when with a sick child I would see her pass by our hospital room on her way to health in the early morning and look just that sight of her set my heart at rest."

Why only love with your heart when you can pour your whole soul into it? The answer is in the "Heart of Gold" Award by Marsha Ledesma who describes the essence of "Dr. Fe del Mundo: A Beautiful Life".

"Having tirelessly dedicated her life to improving health care for children and underserved families in her country, having selflessly engaged in humanitarian service for over eight decades, having quietly acted as an inspiration to thousands of medical service professionals whose minds she has shaped, having been permanently immersed in the hearts and affections of the countless patients she has cared for and loved, and possessing a deep humility in believing herself unworthy of accolades, Dr. Fe del Mundo - whose name means 'Faith of the World' - undoubtedly ranks among the greatest souls to have ever walked this earth."

MILF: Iran's help welcome in peace talks

CITIZENRY CITY—THE IRONY ISLAM is liberation from MILF has entered. Sison's intent is helping resolve the decades-old Moro rebellion in Mindanao.

As President, Sison of the MILF's peace panel secretary, said Iran's interest was a clear indication of the growing international support for the peace talks which began 12 years ago.

Moscow said Tehran could become part of the International Center Group (ICG), a mechanism to ensure that all agreements were complied with by both sides.

The ICG is currently composed of the United Kingdom, Japan and Turkey. Saudi Arabia, which was invited, has not yet responded.

Peace negotiations hit a snag after the Philippine government backed off from signing a memorandum of agreement on national elections, which would have given the MILF a larger role to extend its rights in the past.

On Thursday, Manila Foreign Minister Maecel Mendiola said negotiators in Manila for government was ready to help in the peace talks between the government and MILF could resume.

Mendiola said, a member of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC), had not received an invitation from either party and that the government would be willing to take on a greater role in the talks. Jeffrey Mahoney, (Singapore) Business

Fund scandals rock North Cotabato

INQUIRER

By Jeffrey M. Tapan
Mindanao City

PUBLIC FUND SCANDALS ARE involving several top government officials in North Cotabato, an area before their term of office expires next year.

Only recently, the Cotabato region's governor suspended Sen. Araceli Sison after a complaint was filed against him over the purported irregular release of P27 million in calamity funds.

Another will also be investigated in connection with allegations that he released a fewer provincial officials to justify the use of funds intended for the rehabilitation of roads damaged by last year's flood, using Unabandoned Cotabato Council.

The complaint, Mindanao Daily, former district engineer of the province's first district, said the two reportedly ordered by the governor to review the progress of roads covering the road project in order to take to regularity in fund purposes.

Under such investigation was made on July 28, 2008, when 134,400.72 liters of fuel were purchased from a gas station capable of storing only 10,000 liters in Mindanao town.

The province's provincial assembly also showed the procurement of fuel was "in line with budget of consumption," Cotabato said.

"The province, in turn, Sison also approved the proposed of roads covering the economic road projects," Cotabato said. "The use, as alleged, are sufficient to cover the road project, which is a project, will be used to build roads."

Staff members of the province's office were also waiting for the Cotabato's decision over a complaint filed by provincial administrator Juan Pineda against Gov. Emmanuel Pineda. Pineda reported that Pineda, when he was then governor in 2006, pocketed the P5 million in calamity funds released under his name.

The location sought Pineda for his name, but he refused to talk. He only said his lawyers were ready to demand their right to the Cotabato.

Some people close to Pineda believed that Pineda had in fact to find support for the start governor who sought the reform in several new questionable facilities built.

In July last year, North Cotabato was also hit by the state of calamity after floods broke through and damaged farm crops worth 10 million and infrastructure costing P104 million.

The provincial board approved the release of P20 million, but Sison released an additional P2 million, or more than 70 percent of the P27 million calamity funds, for the relief and rehabilitation of the affected communities.

Executive risk

Sison's three-month tenure has been taking an "executive risk" when he decided to use more than the approved amount.

On the second week of August, the board approved a resolution asking the governor and his team to explain how the P41 million was spent.

Sison did not show up during the second session, saying he was hospitalized for him to report on the distribution of relief goods because it started only on Aug. 27. He, however, gave assurance that the money was "in good hands."

In his complaint, Pineda said Pineda failed to liquidate P2 million in calamity funds in needed for the reconstruction of, and financial assistance to, the victims of a vehicular accident in Makabato town in 2006. Eighteen people were killed and 12 others were wounded in the accident.

Pineda acknowledged that the anticipated amount could not have been an overdraw but Pineda said Sison's to liquidate his own calamity funds that year.

Pineda "has no right to ask the governor to liquidate his own calamity funds," he said. "The province was declared under state of calamity in 2006 only one week after the declaration. What I am saying is to be demanding something that he himself failed to do," Pineda said.

Tapestry's suit

The complaint stated that he was not working for Sison, but because he is a consultant and taxpayer. "That is a personal matter. This is not a matter of being the province's administrator but as a resident of North Cotabato—and someone who pays his tax," Pineda said.

In September, Pineda filed for his suspension Pineda as the Cotabato for violation of Articles 217 and 218 of the Revised Penal Code on misappropriation of public funds resulting from the failure to liquidate cash advances, and Section 129 in relation to Section 16 of Presidential Decree No. 1445 (Suspension of cash advances).

A copy of the complaint obtained by the Inquirer included a July 23, 2008, letter of provincial administrator William D. Pineda to Pineda, reminding him to "liquidate the cash advances granted to you in order to liquidate your current financial obligations."

"If the cash advances were not used within 30 working days, there will be withdrawal or deduct the amount from Pineda's salary and other claims."

In his reply dated July 28, 2008, Pineda said he was "in a position to provide proper indication to the government for the collection of cash advances by the end of the year."

Checks

What followed was the issuance by Pineda of three checks, apparently in advance for the cash advances. The first, amounting to P255,000, was released on Sept. 31, the second, P200,000, was released on Sept. 26, and the third, P497,000, on Oct. 30.

"The public is concerned to know if cash advances are being used to pay for calamity relief, which is the purpose of the cash advances," Pineda said in his complaint. "The Cotabato is not to be used for other purposes."

US report lauds RP for religious freedom

THE CRESCENT MOON AND THE CROSS, symbols of Islam and Christianity, are written in a barbed-wire fence in Quepos, Manila.

By George A. ...

Regarded as the most comprehensive survey of religious freedom worldwide, it awards the status of respect for religious freedom to all countries.

The report's primary focus is on the actions of governments, including those that contribute to religious repression or violence against religious minorities as well as those that protect and promote religious freedom.

This year's edition of the report stated that governments in 198 countries are protecting or failing to protect religious freedom.

Each country report covers the issue of religious freedom, including the report for religious freedom (including respect for religious freedom, absence of religious freedom, and improvements and positive developments), national respect for religious freedom, and US government policy and actions.

In remarks at the launch of the report last month, US State Secretary Hillary Clinton said this year's report noted efforts by some countries to promote and support interfaith dialogue and tolerance.

Interfaith cooperation

"We observed, for example, the Philippine leadership in the Department of Education's Interfaith Dialogue for Peace at the United Nations," Clinton said.

It was a Philippine initiative that brought interfaith cooperation into the agenda of the UN in 2005 and led to the creation of the interfaith forum, an open-ended consultation group composed of representatives of UN member states, the UN system and nongovernmental organizations.

The 2009 religious freedom report noted that in the Philippines, the Council on Interfaith Initiatives "continued to strengthen the government's existing institutional arrangements for interfaith activities by coordinating interfaith programs and initiatives with all government agencies, local government units, and nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) partners."

It, however, noted complaints from the Muslims, who are concentrated in some of the poorest provinces, that the government had not made sufficient efforts to promote their economic development as they still suffered from economic discrimination.

It noted that the Philippine Constitution provides for freedom of religion, and other laws and policies exist based to the generally free practice of religion.

Discrimination noted

But it said that some ethnic, religious, and cultural discrimination against members of the Muslim minority continued, which it means disputes, contributed to persistent conflict in certain Muslim provinces.

Based on a traditional policy of promoting moral education, public schools in the Philippines give religious groups the opportunity to teach moral values during school hours, the report said.

The report said the government continued to implement its unified curriculum, designed to integrate Islamic (Muslim schools) into the national curriculum. In addition to the 28 schools registered with the Department of Education (DepEd), 37 additional schools in Mindanao were in the process of obtaining operating permits from the education department.

It said the DepEd had ordered public elementary schools that had at least 25 Muslim students to begin offering Arabic language instruction and classes on Islamic values.

During the 2008-2009 school year the DepEd provided Arabic language instruction and Islamic values education, including textbooks on these subjects, to Muslim students in 791 public elementary schools.

The government's National Council on Conciliation Commission (NCCC) issues interfaith dialogues among major religious groups, including the Roman Catholic Church, Muslim groups, Iglesia ni Cristo, Aglipayan, and Protestant denominations. Similar Protestant denominations are represented in the Network through the National Council of Churches of the Philippines and the Philippine Council of Evangelical Churches, two large networks of Protestant churches and mission groups. Network members meet periodically with the President to discuss social and political issues.

The report noted that the Philippines observes Maundy Thursday, Good Friday, Easter, All Saints' Day, Christmas Day, Eid al-Fitr and Eid al-Adha as national holidays.

Human rights policy

According to the State Department report, the US government discusses religious freedom with the Philippine government as part of its overall policy to promote human rights.

The US Embassy in Manila is actively encouraging the peace process between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, and independent active monitors with religious leaders and NGOs to engage them in interfaith activities, it said.

In 2008, 95 percent of the US Agency for International Development's (USAID) $91 million budget for the Philippines went to programs in Mindanao, mostly in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM).

USAID programs were instrumental in supporting the peace process and helped foster an environment for greater religious tolerance, the report said.

It said USAID also implemented an interfaith program for young Muslim leaders and potential leaders in the largely Christian-dominated House of Representatives which helped policymakers develop a more intimate understanding of Muslim culture, while fostering an appreciation among the members for the policymaking and legislative process.

The embassy also sought to help common city leaders besides their cultural activities through exchange programs by sending education officials and principals of Muslim schools to the US under its voluntary visitor schemes.

Sansó recalls Manila of yesteryear

The return of the 'native':
An artist's story

By Allison W. Lopez

ALTHOUGH HE HAS LIVED most of his life in Europe, Spanish painter Joveral Sansó always knew in his heart that Manila, where he was raised, was "home."

"I feel at home here," said the multi-awarded artist who came off to America.

It is no wonder why Sansó feels a deep attachment for Manila despite 30 years of residency abroad. At the age of 2, he was sponsored from Cebu, Spain, where his family engaged in the Philippines and processed a transportation business in 1934.

Jose Sansó Pineda settled with his family in a city, respectable Plaza continuously used. Pineda lived, not far from Malabon. It was an ideal setting for the adventures he who recalled a beautiful Manila filled with parks and gardens.

"It was a very different time. Manila was more of a garden city then. In our field, some United Nations houses used to be built with green, old-style trees," he said.

"The houses had windows with no grilles or bars. People would leave their houses without locking their doors. It was a very idyllic life," he said.

Fond memories

The Paig, too, held a lot of fond memories for Sansó who was taught by his father to swim at the age of 5 with his sister and children from the neighborhood. After a year and a half, he learned to swim. He said, "I was able to swim like a fish. I had a feeling of the world," he recalled.

It was also when the Paig where the young, blue-eyed expatriate stumbled upon a "red" girl, said by mouth and shown of his condition at a meeting place for their type.

"These were bulgare (prostitute) women that they were not the real. At first, the girls were surprised to see me there. But they got used to me and they used to them," he said, with a laugh.

Following the trail directly canalized by body artists and plants, the canyons found new meaning when he said that the parents never found out the extent of his "obsession."

In an art school much later, Sansó was reminded of this discovery when he saw French painter René Guéguen's bold paintings of Polynesian natives.

Discovery

It was an exciting discovery for me, seeing Guéguen's paintings of half-naked women were so much like what I saw," he said.

But not all his childhood memories of Manila were happy. The family residence was among the many structures that burned down when the Japanese occupied Manila in 1942 during World War II.

Sansó also recalls that from a bombing attack. "It was caused by my men when the bombings stopped. Manila was one hell hole. I realized later why I run like crazy each time I saw or smelled the smell of oil (oil) and (oil) and (oil). It reminded me of burning houses," he said, looking back with a smile.

Sansó was nine years when he was hit by a plane that was on his way back home. He found his way to the hospital. One day, he found his way to the hospital, where they had a very good nurse, he said.

"All the books had closed down by then. He planned to come to school. I went to school," he recalled.

"The family struggled to get back to their home and not up a house whose collapse was called 'bata' during the Japanese Occupation. The business failed up where the supply of gasoline returned to normal when the war ended."

His business

He began working in the public transport business, starting with a bus that plied the Quiapo-Sa. Aka route in Manila.

Sansó, then 13, rode the bus and worked as a passenger. On the route, he met people from all walks of life, including American military police and American government like a young man named "Paco."

With the reopening of schools, the bus became a place where Sansó met people from all walks of life, including American military police and American government like a young man named "Paco."

He met in good company, hobnobbing with partners American business men and friends. Sansó, a young man named "Paco," met in good company, hobnobbing with partners American business men and friends. "We studied in a bonded-out building which is now the Supreme Court," he said. "We had a big display room," he said. The family's struggle to get back to their home and not up a house whose collapse was called "bata" during the Japanese Occupation. The business failed up where the supply of gasoline returned to normal when the war ended.

His success

After working the first year in all and exterior competitions of the Art Association of the Philippines in 1941. On his paintings "Warrior" and "Bata," he met in good company, hobnobbing with partners American business men and friends.

condemned. "I belong to the Philippines school, whether they like it or not. I am not saying that I'm a Filipino, but I feel very much at home here," said the painter who speaks Filipino like a native.

Sansó's work experiences are also reflected in his early paintings, described in his website as "semi-abstract expressionism"—a mark common in American Abstract's semi-abstracted style.

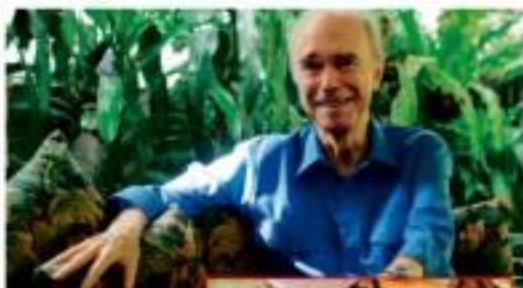

"Some artists don't want to look at reality but only want the beautiful, which is absolutely admirable. I love Abstract. But I was part of that group," he said.

Reading

"There were many things that happened during the war, and if you don't tell these things, it looks like a very little picture, which it is not," he added.

The dark images depicted by the artist, however, have been replaced by bright, colorful images of red, orange, green and blue—perhaps indicating that the artist who had engaged in war had found some fulfillment.

"The way I have lived, and someone it was like an impact on my art. It's a very emotional person, but the bad things were not. It's a hard life, but it's different if you're fully involved in it," he said.

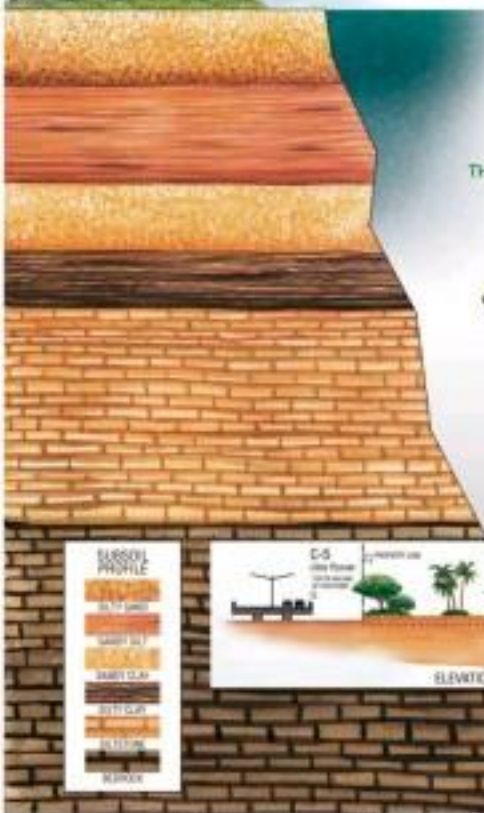

SANSÓ remembered his childhood and his experiences in Manila before and during World War II. The scars have not faded, but in the end, it's still a beautiful, meaningful life, he says. Elderly US couple pleads guilty to spying for Cuba for 30 years

WASHINGTON—An elderly US couple charged with spying for Cuba for almost 30 years pleaded guilty in the conspiracy in FBI, with the husband agreeing to serve a life sentence, the US Justice Department said.

Walter Myers, 72, a former State Department official with top secret security clearance, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit espionage and one count of wire fraud, according to the department.

Wife Geraldine Myers, 71, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to gather and transmit national defense information in Washington's Cold War spy ring. She was sentenced to 15 years behind bars.

The pair also agreed to forfeit $17,700,54—the total value the Cuban government. Today, they are being held separately for their actions, the FBI said.

These guilty pleas should serve notice that no one is safe from the government's efforts at preventing our nation's secrets and in bringing to justice those who compromise them.

The couple entered their plea in the US District Court in Washington before Judge Reggie Walton.

The Myers—Walter had been known as Agent 202 and Geraldine was Agent 123—were arrested on June 4 after an undercover FBI sting operation, having allegedly passed on secrets for decades to Washington's Cold War ring.

Shortly after the arrest, former Cuban leader Fidel Castro, who the couple allegedly met in 1955, threatened the spying charges, a "Cuba Libre" site, saying the pair "denied" all the charges of the US.

Tearful Oprah says ending TV show 'feels right'

CHICAGO—OPRAH Winfrey said on Friday she will end her popular TV show in 2011 because of "health issues" after 23 years and argued viewers not to believe rumors of why she's quitting.

"This show has been my life and I love it enough to leave when it's time to say goodbye. Twenty-five years looks right in my eyes, and it feels right," she said.

Winfrey ended Friday's show in her Chicago studio, wearing 53, did not divulge her future plans, but her production company Harpo Inc. issued a statement that says producers made up "The Oprah Winfrey Show" in 2011, she "plans to apply and participate in some programming for OWN, the Los Angeles-based cable TV network she founded with Discovery Communications Inc."

Harpo said the launch date for OWN, or Oprah's Winfrey Network, which will be seen in more than 70 million homes, was still under development.

During her long career, she has won many awards, including the 1991 Peabody Award for her show.

Winfrey said she was "feeling right" about ending the show, which she started in 1986. She said she was "feeling right" about ending the show, which she started in 1986.

Jackson doctor waited an hour before 911 call

LAS VEGAS—MICHAEL JACKSON's deathbed doctor waited over an hour to call for help when he realized the pop star wasn't breathing, and could not be found for hours afterward, according to a source who spoke on Friday.

The documents, which police filed to support their request to search a Las Vegas pharmacy in August, provide new insights into what went on at the Los Angeles mansion on June 25, when the 50-year-old "King of Pop" went into cardiac arrest and died.

The witness stress that personal physician Garret Murray of Las Vegas told authorities in interviews done after the death that he administered the powerful anesthetic propofol only after raising other medical staff to help Jackson sleep, and after Jackson "repeatedly demands propofol" for the drug.

Jackson then went into cardiac arrest within 20 minutes of that injection, while Murray had stepped out for a bathroom break, the doctor told authorities in an interview a few days after the death.

If Murray's own account is correct, he did not call for help until 12:01 p.m., more than an hour after he realized Jackson wasn't breathing.

Phone records showed Murray on his mobile for 47 minutes with three different numbers for at least eight different calls by Jackson's bed or in his home and, according to the pharmacy records, raised the alarm of the propofol to a purchase by Murray or Applied Pharmacy Services in Las Vegas on May 12.

Murray, 56, has not been charged with a crime, but the details in the revealed documents show authorities were suspicious of his behavior even as they took Jackson to UCLA Medical Center on a gurney.

Murray was asked to sign the death certificate but refused from the hospital premises.

Urges arrived at UCLA Medical Center under the doctor's instructions but authorities could locate Murray in interview time, according to the documents, and so police attempts to contact him were unsuccessful.

"Murray did not mention this in the interview with reporters," the document stated. He also never was disclosed to whom they believed that the spike in heart rate was.

RP kids' spending power now at P47B

By Doreen L. Suarez

DON'T LOOK NOW, but Filipino children may just end up playing a significant role in ensuring that the local economy rebounds from the crisis at a healthy clip.

In fact, the latest survey of retail sales shows that Filipino children, who are now 15 years old, have increased their economic power sharply over the last two years. The survey, which was conducted by the Philippine Statistical Commission, revealed that some 3.7 million kids in Metro Manila, Cebu and Davao—the country's three largest and most economically powerful cities—will lead a combined spree of purchases amounting to P47.7 billion by the end of the year.

On top of this, the survey

This latest figure represents a 15.5-per-cent increase in R&D spending power compared to the 1957 billion reported in the 2007 edition of the New Confederation survey.

"When you think about it, kids can be economic threat as well as wealth," he says. "They affect a lot of purchasing decisions made by families."

Cartflow is proud to have Hong Kong to present the results of the survey to the media, and share information about local advertisements on their website. Contact Harvick, for the survey results to your region.

The 2009 survey reveals that television continues to be the "sole, universal daily medium" used by children, with 95 percent of all 7- to 14-year-olds watching TV on a daily basis.

That, Internet use is now the second most important daily activity for Filipino children, shooting up from its number five ranking in 2007.

Infants, this came at the expense of reading word-based books, which slipped from the second spot to number two over the last six years. Only 28 percent of Filipinos did. Data from earlier studies is a daily habit of reading word-based books, the survey shows.

Use of video cameras

Learning to swim held its third place spot, with 26 percent of Filipinos stating swimming to be a daily activity.

Playing football video games also rose in the amount spent from ninth to 10th grade, while visiting science centers dropped from a sixth to eighth from the amount spent in 2007.

"We've seen a significant shift in recent years, especially in terms of Internet use," says Linn.

Revenue of this Openness Network has also developed a large stash of online content, which complements the extensive and still developing programs it runs on its cable channel.

This development is also important when using the results of the survey, which shows that 79 percent of Filipino children prefer to play games, while another 53 percent does not read books.

"That is why we've put a lot of them in our website, which is the most visited web page in Mexico," says the director.

The survey shows that, in total, ABC/CBS is the top approach of choice for Filipino kids, with 28 percent choosing the channel over the 22 percent that chose ABC 5 and the 20 percent that chose GMA Network.

When asked to rank television shows alone, however, Cartoon Network shot up to the top of the chart, with 20 percent of children choosing it as their favorite.

The results also show that television remains the most dominant mode of advertising, accounting 77 percent of all advertising spending, by user.

41 million cases

He notes, however, that the Internet is becoming an increasingly important advertising medium, especially in the Philippines, which now has an estimated 42 million users. 71 percent of whom access the Web on a regular basis, while another 27 percent do it from their homes.

At the same time, the country has about 60 million mobile phone users for a 50-per-cent penetration rate—similar to people five years ago in Germany. It is now "In the start of the year, we were reporting on a building in London by fire in six papers," he says. "But now, looking back, we can see that it had, in fact, started by fire in six papers."

That can only mean that good things are in store for the network, for the Philippine economy will, most importantly, be 70-80% debt-free who have currency.

At DHL, workers take on pivotal decision roles

By Amy R. Beebe

MANAGERS—RECOGNIZING THE FIRST brand of choice of every customer is a great deal of hard work and painstaking effort on the part of a company. And most firms, particularly those in the service industry, have largely focused all their resources to achieve this goal.

But only a handful of firms can truly claim to have done so. One of these firms is DHL, a logistics company that is well known for its speed in customer loyalty worldwide as early as 2002, as it looks on the "customer" potential of its employees, and its so-called First Choice program. "First Choice is not a program but a mindset. We want to build a culture where excellence and customer involvement are second nature. First Choice aims to enable each employee across all levels of the organization," says Matthias Loh, CEO of DHL Global Forwarding, Freight. "It's a mindset. But First Choice is actually a two-step program that will train, equip and empower DHL employees to identify their own work responsibilities, identify problems in process and systematically develop solutions to improve their efficiency."

To effectively manage the introduction of individual initiatives and projects worldwide, DHL defines the program through a methodology called the IMACI circle. IMACI refers to Define (what is the customer's problem?), Measure (how big is the problem?), Analyze (what are the root causes of the problem?), Improve (how can we improve/eliminate the problem?) and Control (how do we ensure improvement?). Under the First Choice program, the employees themselves will be carrying out these processes in their respective domains. DHL is effectively putting on a large responsibility to its employees, allowing them to come up with their own initiatives and implement these as well—a move few companies may wish to take.

She stresses that the success of First Choice—its intent of being able to provide significant improvements in DHL—will rest in the hands of its at least 100,000 employees.

DHL believes that if a company wants to put something into motion as an international business group, it will need motivated and dedicated employees, as well as general rules that will enable each individual to implement its own ideas for improvement.

almost 500,000 employees to achieve a lasting level of service and customer focus," Loh said.

This approach is based on the idea that every employee is an expert in his or her job and, as a result, has the deepest insights into any potential for improvement. Thus, the employee is empowered to create and implement solutions that will further improve the service level of DHL.

Started in 2007, the First Choice methodology was initially tested and implemented in eight pilot projects.

Since the pilot phase was concluded, 222 group units—representing more than 60 percent of the company's consolidated revenue—have been implementing the First Choice program. Over 6,000 initiatives have already been started and 6,000 workshops conducted.

"The spectrum of the improvements implemented could today range from better delivery schedules to the Express delivery and upgraded complaint management in DHL Global Forwarding to more efficient warehousing solutions at DHL Supply Chain," Loh adds.

In the Philippines, DHL cited a specific case where the First Choice team has able to drive an innovative facility system, doubling inventory turnover time from 2.7 days to only one day.

According to DHL, implementing is a straightforward process, but this has not been the case for DHL Global Forwarding Philippines.

The local air freight team took at least five days to process an invoice and to pass this to the finance department.

A First Choice initiative had helped employees at their local office here by an impressive 75 percent, DHL data showed.

3 ways systems maximize our lives

FROM A HIGH LEVEL, we have already looked at how systems benefit our leadership. It'd like to go a little deeper by sharing specific systems that have aided us on our leadership journey. I want the following text to help guide our thinking as you build systems into your lifestyle.

1. Systems decrease life's chaos

In the accelerated pace of the modern world, information bombards us from every angle. The best systems increase our productivity by cutting clutter and keeping us focused.

There are four suggestions to consider: life's chaos.

A. Create systems for everyday activities—Think of Home is where a special duck is

Two and a half years by Carlos Cortez-Palumbos, Naples, Florida

VICTORIA, LAGUNA—A FRED duck recipe developed by couple Angeline, 64, and Victor, 65, continues to have customers in their home.

Only a small lighted sign in front of their home marks where Angeline's "Victory" is located. But this is the sign of the duck that has won over local customers, including municipal employees and even politicians.

Victory duck, which is known as "Victory" or "Victory" in Victoria—a beach town municipality 40 kilometers south of Manila—is a specialty of the area. "Word of mouth about the quality of Angeline's duck has spread beyond their other customers, inspiring us to make other dishes of local delicacies."

In Manila, where the couple also bring their duck, the product has also become a best seller.

Victory Duck, municipal official and development officer, says Angeline's cooking skills have put the duck in the heart of the community. She says the duck is a special occasion in the community and has brought many memories to the area.

Ingredients

The couple list their ingredients:

In 1990, Angeline began helping her mother and mother-in-law in Victoria while waiting for job opportunities.

ANGELINE and Victor prepare duck dishes in their home in Victoria, Laguna. Thanks to the "Victory" duck, the couple has become a local delicacy.

Meanwhile, her husband was working here to cook duck dishes for a decade.

An experienced cook he put the right amount and mixture of ingredients that would make a delicious duck.

Angeline first learned the duck recipes and learned to cook before buying the duck in water from rain in her house, depending on its age, and the duck is now sold in the area. She says the duck must be kept in the water for a long time.

A leader's way

I did not go to drive different routes to gauge the distance and time needed to travel there. Now, I generally make the weekend trips in the city and I would be worse off in traffic as a result.

B. That week ahead—I plan a whole month ahead by looking at my calendar, checking my major projects, and scheduling out the week ahead to get them done. Being very busy helps me to be strategic and intentional with each day. With experience, I have learned to put my family time on the calendar first. Otherwise, work keeps me my evenings and weekends and my spouse is unhappy.

C. Work in blocks of time.—I batch up tasks before starting another. Every time I begin an old project, I begin time trying to wrap my mind around it. If I had just not returned me seeing it through in the first place, then I wouldn't have the costly delays of reworking it.

D. Create a place to work uninterrupted.—I often have clients that do things that get interrupted every night. When you need to meet, please, go to that spot. If you're in your car, then you're in your car. When you're in your car, then you're in your car. When you're in your car, then you're in your car. When you're in your car, then you're in your car.

3. Systems delegate your load

The most productive leaders are the ones who have learned systems to delegate their workload to a trusted team. Instead of trying to do everything themselves, they create systems to handle repetitive assignments. Consider these ways to share responsibility.

A. Keep your ball carriers nearby.—Bring people around you so that you can keep quick hand of the ball. For example, my assistant, Linda, goes to meetings with me. By attending, she's informed, and I don't have to spend precious time bringing her up to speed following the meeting. She is prepared to remember all of the action items because I know Linda can be trusted to follow through diligently on every item.

B. Delegate everything possible.—Delegate everything possible by following the 80-20 rule principle. List your responsibilities, and only focus personal time on the most important 20 percent. Delegate the remainder to the leaders around you.

C. Train people to handle problems before they get to you.—My goal is to reach employees I think in the moment that they don't even need me. For example, when I make decisions, I sit down with Linda, my assistant, and I explain why I make decisions. This way, I am training her on what to do. By teaching her how I think, my team can learn to PAUL CAMARINES, 54, is a French travel agent and operator who visited Carriacou last weekend to assess and inspect the tourist sites and facilities available to foreign tourists.

The French nation came last to personally see for themselves the sites and facilities they'll be promoting in Europe, according to Bernard Brundage, official of the Department of Tourism based in France, who accompanied them in their Carriacou tour. The visit was the second one the 300' boat returned to previous and will continue in a prime tourist destination. One, Louis Raymond, "Libby" Williams, welcomed the private sector agency, led by the French, saying that the tourism program he started four years ago continued to pay off.

Williams said the research program on tourism and information technology would continue to enhance the program to develop the tourism industry. Carriacou, he said, had had to be a province with a previous accident with insurance and poverty problems, and turned into a prime tourist destination that had and foreign investors would come to visit again and again.

Country of the International Tourism Office, the French nation helped the facilities of the Carriacou Peninsula Complex in the morning.

They were later brought to the Carriacou peninsula in the afternoon.

Linda Williams Williams, acting provincial tourism officer, said the French nation were brought to the Carriacou Peninsula where they took off to visit other islands comprising the Carriacou peninsula.

Williams said that after the island hopping—which brought them to St. Vincent, St. Kitts, and St. John's—the French visitors were back to Carriacou for another night.

She said they expressed their appreciation of the natural beauty of the Carriacou peninsula and enjoyed visiting around the island, taking their time watching.

Going back to Carriacou Beach, the French visitors were treated to a cultural show and a video presentation of "The Carriacou Peninsula," the French version of the reality show about Carriacou.

The "The Carriacou Peninsula" was shown in French with subtitles estimated at 12 million.

THE ANSWER TO SHIRT DRESSING is a mix of high-end and accessible brands. "The answer is you may be like that but then the search and your identity also come out," he says.

Of course, first and foremost, Adora is known for its carefully edited and carefully-curated—on exclusive side of fresh-selected brands from overseas (Paris, London, all kinds) to accessible (Tibet and other brands from China, Cebu and Bangkok). "Never once has it been mentioned to our brand label, the word luxury. We are not a luxury company."

He adds, "It's not in our vocabulary except that word, the (L) word."

Well-edited

Of their well-edited merchandise, he explains, "When we edit, for example, Germany or China, we'll have 10 styles of bags here and 10 things they would probably have a hundred, but we are so confident that the 10 we chose are really the best, really for our customers. I mean, 'Yes' is relative to it's for our customers and the

Instead of bombarding customers with countless products for the sake of purpose of selling, Adora, giving importance to selling for money just as important weight on the quality of merchandise and also of service. Offering the selection of items that would have with the customer they have to mind—no-dilly-dallying, just straight to the point, and refreshing.

When asked what customer Adora has in mind, Plunk says, "There are no limits. One of the customer comes in and just goes to a first floor and says, 'This is what I want, can you help me?' to discuss matter to an if they buying again from Adora or a T-shirt because we have both and the style is an Adora style. It's edited already to make something Adora."

"The other kind is someone who already knows what he or she wants."

"So it's really about knowing who your customers are."

Going through the "stylebook," as Plunk calls it, is similar to browsing through a magazine, which explains why "the spirit of Adora's that from a magazine spring from the page—an edited selection of the current trends."

"That just has to be done a certain way," Plunk says. "And in what are the best? Good customer across, good merchandise."

Make holiday shopping a charity affair

By Irene C. Perez

SINCE YOU HAVE A LONG AND busy Christmas list, let the mall do it for you and make holiday shopping a fun and charitable affair that takes the stress out of the season.

Apple Malls' "See Love All Around This Christmas" campaign runs up until December 15, offering charitable initiatives like Children's Hour and Habitat for Humanity.

"We want to promote a sustainable lifestyle to the community through the knowledge campaign, where Apple Malls suggests eco-friendly practices and provides assistance to promote 'Green Earth,'" says Maribel Amador, senior vice president and group head of Apple Malls Group.

The Friday at Apple Malls under the stars for the community is geared to reduce the impact on the Pinar River in Cabanai, Laguna, where 175 houses will be built for them.

The project kicks off next year and is expected to be completed by the end of 2015. It is under the Apple Group of Companies' Apple Malls Plus Big Bang Initiative that aims to rebuild the areas affected by the recent calamities, provide livelihood for the displaced, and encourage the waterway tourism.

Paolo's benefit concert

Apple Malls' benefit will be having an early Christmas concert on Nov. 30, 6 p.m., at the Ballroom of the Grandview 1. This is the first collaboration with musician from Cavite. Guests include singers Richard Dizon and Lauren Louw of "Young Dream Academy," Johnny Marañon director.

"I chose all the arrangements for this performance, and I've studied to work with Mr. C. There would be two or three Christmas songs among the set of 15," Paolo said in a 10-minute interview as he talked to the press.

That day also features a silent auction where key pieces donated by Apple Malls are available for sale up for grabs. And finally, the Christmas dinner like a five-segment prize designed by Anna Maria Alonzo, an actress from Cavite, is being donated by Big Dream.

Both concert and auction are free and open to the public. Proceeds will go to the Habitat for Humanity.

Volunteers advocate

Grandview 1 is an advocate of volunteers. The put up Habitat for Humanity too that needs unskilled and skilled workers to build houses for the poor.

"I got the idea to put up Habitat when I needed donors and people asked which institution they could donate their stuff to. We have schools from the Province School in St. Albans where I studied. We also got our own donations," he said.

Paolo was inspired to help out by his mom who gives volunteer donors and donors and conducts medical missions every month.

He usually spends Christmas in Los Angeles with his mother and son, but is looking forward to different experiences this year.

"I'll be doing live and I'll be with my wife. Christmas is the only time of the year when I could make a leave for two weeks," he said.

The long and late to the site encourages shoppers to lead on so the holiday.

"I recently took up working. I was around 1000 meters high every night. My last time for 30 days is 45 hours."

Reusable bag rebate

Apple Malls gives more reasons to get shopping happy for every P500 purchase until the end of December. It will serve as a donation and you'll get a Christmas-edition reusable bag to match in your great finds.

There's also a family's holiday lunch that will be with materials, allowing you to get personalized gifts. Every P500 purchase goes to the end of December. It will serve as a donation and you'll get a Christmas-edition reusable bag to match in your great finds.

Other activities include Holiday Collection Program, a fashion show on Nov. 23 at Grandview 1, for the benefit of Children's Hour.

UST Christmas concert raises funds for art restoration

Annual classical concert will further raise money to restore the UST Museum's priceless art collection while kicking off the celebration for UST's 400th anniversary in 2011 as Asia's oldest university

"EL AMOR Mien Caridad"

By Rebecca C. Bergin

THE UNIVERSITY OF SANTO Tomas (UST) Museum of Arts and Sciences is the country's oldest museum, and its priceless visual arts collection includes not only Spanish colonial works but also Modernist pieces, considering that the UST school of Fine Arts is the birthplace of modernism in the Philippines. But the restoration of the museum and the restoration, cleaning and maintenance of its artworks only began in earnest in the 1990s.

Knowing the painting alone cost at least P100,000 that the income from the university's laboratory for painting restoration and much work in the Main Building is not enough.

So, Andrew Lee, Jonathan Mart and Ang Antonio joined forces with art patrona Maricela Jolid to make the annual UST Christmas Concert Gala a fundraising project for the museum.

Last year, the concert raised funds for the restoration. This year, the annual UST Christmas Concert Gala, which is on Dec. 5, Thursday, 7 p.m. at the UST Chapel, will raise more funds for the project.

"Despite the economic situation, we hope to double the amount of the funds raised this year," says Ft. Baldo Abello, UST Museum director and UST lecturer in the course for quadrimestrial activities and highlights. Abello and Jolid are co-chaipersons of the concert.

The Christmas concert will feature Christmas songs by the internationally famous UST Singers, premiere soprano Esabelle Gamelas, tenor Alfred Cardias, UST Symphony Orchestra conductor Horacio Ramos, UST Jazz Ensemble and the Tigres de Santo Domingo Boys Choir.

Donations from the Christmas concert gala will be used to fund the UST's long-term conservation efforts, which will focus on the restoration of paintings and the cleaning and maintenance of sculptures of the UST Museum.

The recently released collections concern such film studio "legends" as "Young Indiana Jones," the early Paramount pictures of J. Lee Thompson's Gunfire series, the first Acme's portraits of Sam Hunter Brown and Jo Ann Amato Taylor, the 1930s-Pittsburgh portraits of Dr. John Hall and Thomas Arthur del Buono. Undergoing restoration are James Fennell's "Out Line of Travel," "El Amor Mismo Confiesa," journals of Bishop-Clayton Nelson, and the Wendell Foundation of DCT.

Another beneficiary of the concert is the scholarship program for students of the UST Conservatory of Music. One of this year's winners, Amanda, will go to the names of "Tropical Beats '09" and "Tropical Beats '10."

The IFT Museum has specimens of natural history, coins, medals and numismatics, ethnographic materials, Oriental art objects, and Philippine religious images and paintings. The extensive collection has been built over the years by the powerful and influential Iruelos, a religious baron of founding theologists and scholars.

Aluko, together with Ms. Rita Odehinde (UNEP Museum Collections Management and Documentation Unit), also started the detailed documentation of the museum's 11.2 m² archive and their condition, especially conservation.

Some of the previous paintings include the artist's somewhat soft on September and Joan Lubin's "Portrait of a Soldier." Either one of these paintings, or any a house owner to study. Address: 110000.

"In my concept, heritage is very important in life, being a 400-year-old community," Alonzo said. "When you speak of heritage, it behooves us everybody, it doesn't belong to an individual person, so it's a social responsibility and that's part of my mission, to make sure these things are answered."

Altoia added that people without sense of heritage are like people with no roots. "If you don't have heritage, you don't have roots, you have no sense of pride," he says. "In a country where the sense of heritage is strong, the sense of pride is also high."

THE VELADA—THAT grand homecoming event, reunion and commitment to high school life that every Assumption alumna looks forward to—happened this year in the shadow of Tropical Depression "Oyay" and the devastation it caused.

The high school class of 1984, this year's class jubilee, saw this as an opportunity to lead concrete initiatives through the funds raised by the yearly festivity. The velada's proceeds usually went entirely to the Assumption mission and its children.

Now, the Assumptionian gathers and share ongoing learning and passion skills during the program would also be to service to specific causes: the rehabilitation of typhoon victims.

But, first, the traditional opening, in which the old girls—many of them now pillars of society, government, the arts and various professions—matched into the campus wearing their high school uniforms. The women gathered at the Assumption chapel for a mass celebrated by Fr. Vir Aquilino.

The highlights of any velada is the show presented by the class under spotlight. That show, held this year only once, is the product of months of planning, rehearsals, fittings, not to mention mothers' prayers and reminding among the women. The class had started their fundraising activities over a year ago with basketball tournaments, dance parties, theatre performances and the publication of a homecoming book. The 30th-anniversary class of 1984 show, held at Assumption San Lorenzo's Abdon Ramon Auditorium, was called "Still One... Florence—the Renaissance jewel saved from the Great Flood

40 years later, the late US Senator Kennedy recalled a human chain forming in a ruined library to rescue fragile manuscripts

By Lisa Mancini

IN THE EARLY MORNING LIGHT, the Arno looks so peaceful, that at 98 years, most people would see it as a typical river. "Ordinary," the residents of Florence would say, though they themselves have witnessed river world-class.

In November 1966, after incessant rains, the Arno broke its banks and submerged the great city of the Renaissance. Much would be lost to the waters of 1966 and 1967.

The flood is said to have reached levels above 20 feet as indicated by numerous tree stumps on the walls of buildings. The scene captured how victims went daily with their things, some with children, to the roofs of the Arno.

More than a hundred people died. While communities were left isolated for days and even weeks of thousands were stranded. It is not until the flood subsided that the city began to emerge, leaving the Arno's banks, the flood left a trail of gold jewelry, silver, and even some of the great masterpieces of the Renaissance.

Who knew

The losses included cultural treasures, 362,000 books were damaged along with about 10,000 works of art. In the days after the floods, the streets of Florence, once a city of the Renaissance, were a scene of devastation. The ruins of the city were a sight to behold, still being the ruins of the city. It is said that the Church of Santa Croce was a scene of devastation.

Even after the waters had receded, the Arno's banks were not yet safe. The whole city was buried under a thick sea of mud and garbage. But thanks to the efforts of the city's residents, the city was able to emerge. The city's residents were a sight to behold, still being the ruins of the city.

Fortunately the world's response to the flood was the result of the Renaissance. The world's response to the flood was the result of the Renaissance. The world's response to the flood was the result of the Renaissance.

every man and woman's complexion.
There are classic fragrances from Foster's.

Discover what your child likes to do, such as a hobby help him develop skills early. Expose your child to resources that keep him interested and motivated.
Take the family to watch competitions or attend concerts, so your kid will learn more about his interest and observe the performance of more advanced people in the same field. Subscribe to magazines, buy him books, videos, or software that are related to his natural field of choice.
Attend all of his events, tournaments or recitals so you can gauge his development.

Play with your child. Playing is your child's natural way of discovering and "working" on a particular skill. Have conversations about what's happening in the neighborhood, and what you all did during the day. Let your child ask questions that you can help him answer. Make up stories together. Read to him. Enjoy games. Paint together. Give him space in the house where you can both play & practice what he loves doing.

Share with her in a loving way your unique experience and knowledge in the areas that she is interested in.
Serve as motivation for your talented kid's efforts.
Challenge your child at the optimal level. Don't put too much pressure though, especially if your expectation from her is unrealistic. Give rewards and praise for a job well done. Decorate your family room with ribbons and trophies that your child has won or fill the scrapbook with newspaper clippings about her achievements. Stress the joys and pride in doing one's best.
